Featuring

Dana B. Steien, MD

Paediatric Gastroenterology,
Hepatology and Nutrition
Director of Paediatric Nutrition

Dr Dana Steien was born and raised in rural Wisconsin. Dana completed medical school and pediatric residency at Michigan State University. Her pediatric gastroenterology fellowship was at the University of Michigan. She completed an additional fellowship in pediatric clinical nutrition, at the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia.

After training she returned to the University of Michigan and became the medical director of the Children's Intestinal Rehabilitation Program, where she managed children with intestinal failure, on home parenteral nutrition.

In 2019, Dana joined the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota, where she has helped establish and lead the Pediatric Nutrition Support Hospital Service, as well as the out-patient nutrition support team.

Dana's areas of clinical interest have included iron deficiency, parenteral nutrition, intravenous fluids, and teaching learners how to assess growth and nutritional status in children.
